Next Sunday's Mass

Readings

Isaiah 53: 10-11;

Psalms 32;

Hebrews 4: 14-16

Mark 10: 35-45

Welcome to everyone at Mass today, especially if you are new to our church or haven't been to Mass for some time. If you are of another Christian denomination or non-Christian you are warmly invited to approach the priest or minister and ask or signify your wish for a blessing.

The two shall become one flesh!

According to Christian understanding there are three kinds of Vocations. Vocation to consecrated life or celibate life for religious reason, vocation to single life and vocation to married life or family life. Among these three the latter one is the foundation for the other two vocations. In the first reading, the Book of Genesis tells us of an ideal situation at Creation, when God is creating our human race. It speaks first of all of the relationship between man and woman and is speaking about their original unity.

In the Gospel Jesus speak about Marriage. Two dimensions of marriage that are at the heart of the Jesus' teaching are: Unity and Permanence. Unity: "a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh" (Mk 10:7-8). Marriage is between a man and a woman. Permanence: "What God has united, human beings must not divide" (Mk 10:9). Why are unity and permanence so important in marriage? Human beings have to just look at their heart. Is it possible to just forget and move on with one's life after two people have entered an intimate relationship where everything was shared, at the physical, social, emotional, intellectual, and spiritual levels? In the second part of the gospel reading of today we can see the themes of marriage and children appear together. Why is a healthy family that is ensured by a permanent marriage needed, for the wellbeing of children?

Let us look at some interesting facts in the nature that we see every day. A calf of a cow is able to stand on its feet merely thirty minutes after its birth. Next day: it is all over the place, running uncontrollably. A duckling can swim the very day it is hatched. Even a calf of an elephant, large as it is, can stand on its feet within minutes of its birth, and eventually move with the herd. Now look at a human baby: totally helpless at birth. We take an average of eight to twelve months to crawl, to stand on our feet, and eventually to walk and run. Why is the human baby so vulnerable? It is because of two related facts: the human brain is so complex, and because of its complexity, only about 40% its structure could be complete by the time of birth. On the other hand, a calf's brain could be about 80% complete by the time of its birth. We learn to be human in the company of other human beings. Hence an infant needs to be welcomed among a caring group of people. The development of an infant is greatly influenced by its family and surrounding. And the best place is within the family where he/she is loved and cared for especially through the early years. No wonder then, unity and permanence in marriage ensures a stable family, tied to the wellbeing of the couple, the children, and humanity in general.

We Catholics have an enormous evangelization to do in our modern world. Especially when it comes about marriage and sexual morality. Our challenge is first to live the teachings of Jesus and the Church. We have witnessed so many silver and golden jubilarians in our parish who lived their married life faithfully. Not that they are all perfect couples that they were able to live a successful married life but rather they understood this as a precious vocation and sacrificed everything else to safeguard this invaluable vocation where all point out to Jesus as their source of strength, by which they were able to withstand the ups and downs of their marriages. Let us pray for the married couples during this Eucharistic celebration.
